Dear Colleagues,

The Woolf Institute (Cambridge) is delighted to announce that applications are now being accepted for the e-learning course, Jews, Christians and Muslims in Europe: Modern Challenges. Following two successful years, the course will commence in late February 2013. More than fifty participants from around the world - Australia and New Zealand, China, Japan, Poland, United States, Germany, the Czech Republic, Belgium, Switzerland, and the United Kingdom - have already engaged in this three-part course which focuses on the relationships between Jews, Christians, and Muslims and their impact in modern Europe, looking at their history, culture and issues of citizenship. Find out more about this programme at: <http://www.woolf.cam.ac.uk/courses/jcme.asp>.

The course is taught at a final-year undergraduate level and the e-learning approach allows participants to study wherever and whenever they choose via the internet. With the support of Woolf Institute tutors, you will work both individually and jointly with other students.

The deadline for applications is Friday 1 February 2013. The course commences, with induction week, on Monday 25 February 2013. The application form is available to download at <http://www.woolf.cam.ac.uk/courses/jcme.asp>. The course fee is £350.

Our courses appeal to those interested in history as well as in how faith is impacting on society today, particularly people working in and with faith communities. Past participants have included police officers, educators, human rights officers, lawyers, religious and community leaders, film directors, and journalists.

I should be grateful if you could bring this email and the attached course flier to the attention of your colleagues, students, and other interested parties.

If you have any queries about the course, do contact me at eth22@cam.ac.uk.

Best wishes,

Emma
